Please complete and submit to akearns@johnbapst.org or send to Dave Armistead, 100 Broadway, Bangor 04401

Program Description

The John Bapst Scholars Program is ideal for students who live a long distance from school. Dormitory living itself can be a great way for students to practice independence and self-reliance as a way of preparing for college. The program offers a shared dormitory room in a John Bapst residence hall, beginning with boarding orientation in August and ending with exams in June. Dorm rooms are either doubles or triples. In addition to private tuition (if applicable) and fees, a food charge of $1,500 per semester ($3,000 for the year) is charged to families. John Bapst Scholars are generally in residence five nights per week while school is in session. They may serve as student leaders and ambassadors in the international boarding program. They and their families are encouraged to invite international students home from time to time.

Application Criteria

Students who wish to apply should meet the following criteria:

- be in good academic standing at John Bapst or their current school;
- be in good standing with a record of good citizenship;
- interview with Head of School.

John Bapst Scholars Program Parent Support Statement

I support the application of my student to the John Bapst Scholars Program and I understand that the program offers a shared dormitory room in a John Bapst residence hall.

Financial responsibilities are as follows:

1. Tuition is charged at the day student rate. If the family lives in a sending (school choice) town, the town is billed for tuition. If the family is a private-pay family, the family will be billed for the current private day student tuition, plus athletic, activities, and other fees.
2. The student's family agrees to pay $1,500 per semester for food costs ($3,000 total). This covers the cost of breakfast, lunch, and dinner (on weekends, two meals a day) when the student is in residence. The fee for meals is billed in two installments (at the beginning of each semester). Upon request to the Business Office, it may also be paid monthly from August to May at a rate of $300 per month. Note that if the student chooses to purchase food outside the meal program, the meals fee is not refundable.

The student and parents agree that the John Bapst Scholar will be in residence a minimum of five nights per week while school is in session.

John Bapst Scholars agree to serve as student leaders and student ambassadors in the international boarding program. On a regular basis they provide guidance with issues of cultural adjustment and help on homework, particularly in language-intensive subjects. They and their families are encouraged to invite international students home from time to time.

I understand the fee structure of the John Bapst Scholars Program and support my student's participation.
